

The sites featured in this section include not just highly visible structures built on a grand scale but also smaller constructions, down to the size of individual houses, as well as hidden places such as catacombs. They have been arranged first by continent and then by date of completion.

High vantage

At more than 2,600 ft (800 m) tall, the Burj Khalifa is the tallest structure ever built. Supported by buttresses, its concrete-and-glass towers look down on the trading hub of Dubai, one of the world's fastest-growing cities.