

CANTILEVER

A beam, slab, or other structure supported only at one end, with a clear space underneath and the other end having no supporting columns or bracing, is called a cantilever. Vertical structures, such as towers or walls, can be given stability through cantilevers at their base.

CAMPANILE A free-standing bell tower usually built beside or attached to a church. Campaniles are most often found in Italian architecture.

CAMPO SANTO A cemetery; the term is derived from the Italian and Spanish words for “holy field.”

CAMPUS The land on which a group of college or university buildings is situated.

CANDI ▼ A Hindu or Buddhist shrine or temple in Indonesia.

CANEPHORA A sculpture of a young woman carrying a basket of ceremonial offerings on her head. The sculpture may be free-standing but more often takes the form of a caryatid. See also caryatid.

CANOPY A projecting hood or cover over an altar or statue. In medieval times, this symbolized a divine or royal presence.

CAP The horizontal slab on top of a parapet. See also parapet.

CAPITAL The crowning element of a column that sits between the shaft and the abacus. The capital is usually decorated, and in the Classical tradition, its form belonged to one of three distinct orders: Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian. See also abacus, Classical, order.

CAPSTONE ▼ The top stone; for example, capstones may be used to top off a wall. It is distinct from a keystone, which sits at the apex of an arch. See also keystone.

CARACOL A staircase in a helix or spiral form.

CARAVANSERAI A merchants’ inn organized around a central courtyard with stables on the ground floor and accommodation on the upper floor. Caravanserais were a traditional type of building in Central Asia, in the Middle East, and across North Africa. In some places, they are also known as wikala or fundouk.

CARYATID A sculpted female figure that acts as a column supporting a structure on her head.

CASEMATE A small room in the wall of a fortress with openings from which guns could be fired.

CASEMENT A window frame that opens on side hinges, like a door.

CATACOMB A system of underground tombs.

CASTLE

A castle, or fortress, is a medieval stronghold, usually the residence of a king or a lord. Its stone fortifications provided protection for those within and a secure base from which to rule the surrounding territory. In its most basic form, the castle consisted of a central keep on a mound surrounded by a moat. More elaborate castles would have had a wall punctuated by defensive towers and sometimes even a series of concentric walls.
