MODERNISM

19TH-20TH CENTURIES

Industrial advances in the late 19th century made new construction materials and techniques possible, inspiring a different approach to building. Most of it was centered in rapidly expanding cities. Metal framing and concrete allowed for taller, more complex structures, and the idea of architecture as art took hold.

THE RENAISSANCE

c.14TH-16TH CENTURIES

Architects of the Renaissance revived the rationalism of ancient Greece and Rome, revering symmetry and the laws of geometry. Among the era's innovators was Filippo Brunelleschi, who built without scaffolding, flying buttresses, or supporting arches and used herringbone brickwork to give strength to structures.

ROMANESQUE ARCHITECTURE

c.11TH-12TH CENTURIES

As the Normans spread their political and stylistic influence, they also evolved a Romanesque building style that centered on the arch of ancient Rome. The Normans used arches on a grand scale and revolutionized architecture with their pointed, structural arch, along with a new system of ribbed vaults.

ANCIENT AND MODERN ENGINEERS

The traditions of monumental public structures and planned cities were established by the ancient Greeks and refined by the Romans as they colonized much of the continent. Later, the Industrial Revolution of Northern Europe transformed urban and rural environments with engineering feats, a process that continued in the 20th century with Modernism.
