

GLIDING HIGH

Like the modern-day albatross, Pelagornis was capable of cruising across the oceans at high altitudes for long periods of time without settling on land. Research based on fossil finds suggests that despite its large size and heavy weight, it could glide at speeds of about 38 mph (61 kph).

LARGEST
WINGSPAN: BIRD