

DUBROVNIK

The medieval walled city of Dubrovnik, at the very southern tip of Croatia on the Adriatic Sea, is one of the architectural gems of Europe. In 1991, Serb troops shelled the city, causing immense damage. The city was restored after the end of the war. Other historic cities damaged during the fighting notably Sarajevo and Mostar, in Bosnia and Herzegovina, have also been restored.

GREAT LAKES

Macedonia contains two huge lakes—Ohrid and Prespa. The latter has clear water, fed by underground streams, and is a popular tourist spot. Both lakes have substantial fish stocks, especially of trout and eel, which are used to make local dishes.

LIFE IN ALBANIA

Albania is one of the poorest countries in Europe. Most people are ethnic Albanian, with a sizeable Greek minority in the south of the country. Loyalty to one's family or clan is more important than national identity, and married sons often live with their parents and look after them in old age.

Lake Prespa

An Albanian family

Eel

APOLLONIA

About 8 miles (13 km) outside the city of Fier, Albania, lie the ruins of an ancient city called Apollonia. Founded in 588 BCE by Greeks from Corinth, it is one of 30 cities named after the Greek god Apollo. Austrian archaeologists began excavating the site during World War I, and French archaeologists continued the digging in the 1930s. However, much of the city still remains buried in the surrounding hills.

The shell of an impressive temple still stands at Apollonia, Albania.