

Shallow waters

In the sunlit waters of the Maldives in the Indian Ocean, blacktip reef sharks are rounding up their prey. Forcing the fish into ever denser shoals, they nudge them into shallow water close to the shore before moving in to take a bite. These agile hunters are found in all shallow tropical seas, particularly around coral reefs and lagoons.

