

GIANTS

Giants often looked similar to humans, except that they were much, much larger. Some were so strong that they even fought the Olympian gods.

DRAGONS

Dragons came in many shapes and sizes in ancient Greek mythology. Some were part-human, while others were huge serpents. Ancient Greek dragons did not usually have wings, but, rather, long scaly bodies.

SEA MONSTERS

The sea was full of monsters in Greek mythology, such as Ketos, a giant serpent. They served gods, such as Poseidon, and guarded the oceans.

THE MINOTAUR

The Minotaur was half-man, half-bull and ate human sacrifices. King Minos kept it trapped in the Labyrinth on the island of Crete.

GORGONS

Gorgons, such as Medusa, were fearsome women whose stare turned mortals to stone. They had large wings, sharp claws, and snakes for hair.
