

When Zeus discovered what Prometheus had done, he was furious. He ordered Prometheus to be chained to the Caucasos Mountains. Every day, Zeus sent an eagle to peck at Prometheus's stomach and eat his liver, while the Titan could do nothing. Because he was an immortal being, every night Prometheus would heal, and the punishment would start again the next day.

Prometheus endured this torture for many years, but he was eventually freed by Zeus's son, the hero Heracles.

Prometheus suffered the same punishment every day.

