

Eros and Psyche

Psyche was a mortal, famous for her beauty. Admirers came from far and wide to bring her gifts, claiming that she was as pretty as a goddess.

This infuriated Aphrodite, the goddess of beauty, and she decided to punish Psyche out of envy.

Aphrodite went to Eros and instructed him to strike Psyche with an arrow. Eros was the god of love, and his arrows made anyone fall instantly in love with the first thing they saw. "I want you to make sure that Psyche falls in love with a terrifying monster!" Aphrodite added, laughing.

Eros went to find Psyche, but when he caught sight of her he was so struck by her beauty that he dropped his bow.

Eros accidentally scratched his hand with an arrow and fell in love with Psyche himself.

Meanwhile, Psyche's parents went to consult a prophetess about whom their daughter should marry. To their surprise, the prophetess told them, "Psyche is not destined to marry a mortal man. You must leave her on the Psyche brought a light up to Eros's face.