

A world of bugs

Bugs and their close relatives keep the world working as it should by recycling our garbage, providing food for other animals, and pollinating plants. They are very good at adapting to different environments and can be found all around the world.

Specially adapted bugs can survive even in tough environments like hot, dry deserts.

LIVING TOGETHER

Bugs can be very social creatures. While some bugs are happy to live on their own, many bugs help each other find food, build homes, scare off predators, and raise their young.

Millions of creepy-crawlies burrow beneath the soil, while others prefer to build underwater homes.