

Wood lice

Found all over the world, wood lice like to make their homes in cool, damp places. They particularly enjoy living under old, rotting logs. Wood lice are part of a family of creatures called crustaceans.

Wood lice are known by many names:

pill bug, roly-poly, sow bug, slater, butcher boy, coffin cutter, pea bug, cud worm, and cheesy bug.

Wood lice eat fungi, rotting plants, and even their own poop!

Wood lice babies

Wood lice mothers carry their delicate, bright white babies around in a pouch.

When they are frightened, wood lice hide in crevices or curl up into tight balls.
