

Fat-bottomed ants

A delicacy in Colombia, fat-bottomed ants have a strong salty flavor.

↖ Fat-bottomed ants

DESSERT

Stinkbugs

Don't be put off by their nasty smell; when cooked, stinkbugs taste like apples!

Aphids

Full of sugary sap, a fluid found in plants, aphids can be blended to make syrup.

Cicadas

These long-winged insects are often cooked with buttermilk. They taste smooth and nutty.

Honey ants

Honey ants are perfect sprinkled over ice cream. Their grape-like abdomens are bursting with sweet, warm liquid.

It is important that the bugs we eat are not endangered and that they are farmed responsibly.

CHEF'S SPECIALS

Kunga cake

A heavy cake packed with millions of squashed midges, kunga cake can be eaten on its own or used to add flavor to other dishes.

Casu marzu

Avoid this stinky, maggot-infested cheese. Eating it could harm the human body, so it's now illegal!

Witchetty grubs

When eaten raw, this bug's soft flesh has an almond flavor.

Chapulines

In Mexico, chapulines (grasshoppers) are roasted with lime, garlic, and salt and served on a corn tortilla.

Ant soup

In some parts of Asia, ants or ant eggs can add a sour flavor to spicy soup.

Mealworm quiche

When sprinkled on a quiche, mealworms give a nutty flavor and add a bit of a crunch!

