

Moths are drawn to unnatural sources of light.

Bugs at risk

All over the world, bugs are rapidly disappearing. This is mostly because of changes that humans have made to the planet. If we don't alter our behavior, they will vanish altogether.

Many bugs use natural light from the Sun and Moon to navigate and tell time. Artificial light confuses them, drawing them to the wrong places.