PERFORMING CHANOYU

Each stage of the Japanese tea ceremony is slow and purposeful. The presentation area is kept pure and clean at all times. Lids are replaced on vessels and cloths are refolded. Here is an introduction to some of the simpler steps in this revered ritual.
