

4 Hot water is collected from the kama (kettle) using the ladle and poured into the chawan (bowl).

5 The chasen (whisk) is inspected by the host to make sure that it has no broken tines or worn areas, then placed in the chawan and rotated slowly. The water is whisked briefly and the whisk is removed. This softens, wets, and warms the whisk to keep it from staining.

6 Warm water is rolled around the chawan and then poured into the kensui. The chawan is then dried using the chakin.

7 Two scoops of Matcha are placed in the chawan using the chashaku.
