

CALM

Tisanes that have a calming effect are primarily aromatic. This is because fragrances play a big part in the treatment of stress, anxiety, and insomnia. Some of these tisanes are mildly sedative, while others have an overall soothing quality. Classic ingredients in these restful blends include chamomile, lavender, lemon verbena, and basil.

DIGESTION

Ginger, licorice root, wild cherry bark, cinnamon, hibiscus, cardamom, and fennel are all beneficial for digestive health. Tisanes blended to help with digestion often have a smooth texture and a soothing effect. They can be taken at any time, but are best consumed as an after-dinner beverage.

JOINTS

Ingredients with anti-inflammatory properties are helpful in treating arthritis and other joint problems. The flavonoid quercetin is found in dark-colored fruits, such as cranberries and blueberries. Ginger and turmeric roots also possess anti-inflammatory properties and have shown signs of helping to relieve the symptoms of arthritis and joint pain.

THE ANCIENT EGYPTIANS USED TISANES FOR THEIR HEALING PROPERTIES

LAVENDER

Drinking a tisane containing lavender before bed can help aid a restful sleep.

CHAMOMILE

Immune-boosting chamomile pairs well with citrus fruits, such as lemon, for a light and refreshing infusion.

ROSE HIPS

A rose hip infusion will help fight the common cold. Add a spoonful of honey to mellow the tart flavor.
