

PEACHY ASSAM LATTÉ

SERVES 2

TEMP 210°F (100°C)

INFUSE 3 MINS

TYPE LATTÉ

MILK COCONUT CREAM

Rich coconut cream is the best bet for this latté. The fruitiness of this mix needs some sweetening and the vanilla sugar works nicely. Try this as a dessert tea, or as an indulgent treat for a weekend brunch.

1 ripe peach, cored and sliced,
or canned peach, rinsed

2¾ cups boiling water

3 tbsp Assam tea leaves

6 tsp vanilla-infused sugar

5fl oz (150ml) top thick layer of canned coconut cream,
plus 2 tbsp milk layer

Special equipment

handheld blender

1 Place the peach slices in a teapot and add just enough boiling water to cover.

2 Place the tea leaves in a separate teapot, add the remaining water, and steep for 3 minutes. Strain into the peach infusion and steep for an additional 2 minutes.

3 Pour into a bowl and add the sugar, coconut cream, and coconut milk. Using a handheld blender, blend the peaches into the tea and create a nice froth.

SERVE IT UP Serve hot, topped with a little coconut cream.

SEVILLE ORANGE LATTÉ

TEMP 210°F (100°C)

INFUSE 3 MINS

TYPE LATTÉ

MILK ALMOND

Use a good-quality Seville orange marmalade for this recipe. Its sour and bitter taste will blend beautifully with the robust flavors of the Assam. Almond milk adds rich sweetness to the drink.

3 tbsp Assam tea leaves

2¾ cups boiling water

1 cup sweetened almond milk

2 tbsp Seville orange marmalade

1 Place the tea leaves in a teapot, add boiling water, and steep for 3 minutes. Then strain the tea and discard all the tea leaves.

2 In a saucepan, warm the almond milk with the marmalade on low heat until the marmalade melts.

3 Remove from the heat, strain the orange rinds, and pour into the teapot.

SERVE IT UP Pour into cups from a height to create froth, and serve immediately.
