

I like to file a complaint against myself—for making me come here to complain about me.

What do you mean, 'current is gone?' You mean there's an insufficient electron concentration difference between the two conductors?

No engineer could understand my problem. I already feel better with just one sip of this!

I told you to be more positive for a higher potential—but you have connected all positive points to higher potential!

I know why the LED27 is not blinking. Just change its direction!

Mom, were there waves in the sea before you did the 'Sea Programming?'
