

HOW TO FORM

Non-defining relative clauses can come in the middle of a sentence, or at the end.

If the relative clause comes in the middle, commas must go either side of it. If it comes after the whole main clause, a comma must go at the end of the main clause.

82.2 QUANTIFIERS WITH NON-DEFINING RELATIVE CLAUSES

In non-defining relative clauses, quantifiers can be used to say how many people or things the relative clause refers to. In these structures, "who" becomes "of whom," and "which" becomes "of which."

QUANTIFIER + OF + WHOM

I teach many students, all of whom are very talented.

QUANTIFIER + OF + WHICH

I teach many classes, some of which are very difficult.

FURTHER EXAMPLES

My brother and sister, both of whom live in Ireland, are coming to visit.

Lots of people, many of whom are famous, will be at the event.

I have four essays due next week, none of which are ready.

Tommy has three pets, two of which are cats.
