

110.5 "BUT"

"But" is used to join a positive statement to a negative statement, or to show a contrast between two clauses.

There's a hotel. There isn't a store.

There's a hotel, but there isn't a store.

FURTHER EXAMPLES

My daughter likes to eat apples, but she doesn't like pears.

I wanted to be an architect, but I didn't pass my exams.

I went to the supermarket, but I forgot my purse.

I'm on a diet, but I find it hard to avoid chocolate.

My friend does tap dancing, but she doesn't do ballet.

My friends invited me out tonight, but I don't feel well enough to go.

110.6 "YET"

"Yet" has a similar meaning to "but." It is used when something happens in spite of something else, or when something is true, even though it seems to contradict something else.

It's a warm day, yet Raymond's wearing a coat.

FURTHER EXAMPLES

George lives in the countryside, yet he works in a nearby city.

There was a school near my house, yet I went to one on the other side of town.

I've asked him to be quiet and yet he continues to talk during lessons.
