

20.5 THE FUTURE CONTINUOUS WITH "GOING TO"

The future continuous can sometimes be formed with "going to" instead of "will," but this is less common. It can be used in most future continuous constructions except to speculate about the present.

I can't come out this evening.
I'm going to be studying all night.

HOW TO FORM

SUBJECT

"BE"

"GOING TO BE"

PRESENT PARTICIPLE

REST OF SENTENCE

I am going to be studying all night.

FURTHER EXAMPLES

I want to go away on Saturday, but I'm going to be working all weekend.

I'd love to go out on Thursday, but I'm going to be finishing this essay.

Shall we have lunch next week? I'm going to be visiting your city.

I'm going to be staying with my husband's family for the holidays this year.

Do you want to go to a concert tonight? My wife is going to be performing.

At the lecture this evening, two politicians are going to be talking about crime.

