

29.3 THE FIRST CONDITIONAL

The first conditional, also called the “future real” conditional, uses “if” to describe a realistic action that might lead to a future result.

HOW TO FORM

The first conditional is usually introduced by an “if” clause, followed by the present simple. The future with “will” expresses the result.

FURTHER EXAMPLES

If I go jogging, I'll lose weight.

If it snows, I'll go skiing.

If we go to Africa, we'll go on safari.

If I get the job, I'll buy a new suit.

If I cook, will you do the dishes?

I won't go outside if it rains.
